

Time Out

New York

Kids

JANUARY 2008
ISSUE 27 $2.99

New Parents Special

WELCOME BABY

21 cool places
take a new

Oh, boy!
City bris planner

Field guide to NYC parents

What's your stereotype?

News bite

Mash-up Got a yen for guacamole en molcajete—made in a volcanic-rock mortar and pestle—and a squishy kid? Head to one of Rosa Mexicano's three outposts, where children can get a crash course plus a souvenir I ROCKED THE GUAC apron. There's no charge for the five-minute session (although guac for two will set you back $14), and lessons are available anytime; but guac gurus might be inclined toward a more extensive one-on-one when they aren't slammed. No word yet about whether they'll teach your tots how to make killer margaritas. Go to rosamexicano.info for locations.